

ENVIRONMENTAL

Our environmental law practice assists our clients in transactions, regulatory compliance, and environmental litigation. We help our clients understand and manage the myriad of environmental issues that affect their operations and projects, such as acquisition and real property purchase/leasing due diligence, permitting, siting, federal and state regulatory compliance and enforcement, and legislative matters.

We take a proactive approach to environmental issues by working closely with our clients to develop sensible environmental compliance measures to prevent problems, including audits and employee training. If problems do occur, we effectively work with the regulatory agency to resolve them favorably.

Our environmental lawyers also have the litigation background to defend or prosecute environmentally related litigation and arbitrations.

The collective experience of our environmental lawyers (dating back to the inception of federal environmental policy), coupled with our litigation and technological capabilities, sets Conner & Winters' environmental practice apart in addressing the broad spectrum of our clients' environmental legal issues.
