RELATED PRACTICE AREAS

- Litigation

The McConnell Valdés Bids & Government Procurement Practice Team understands the intricate factors at play before, during and after government contract awards.

Clients turn to us for guidance during the proposal phase of procurement, which is critical not only in terms of competitive bidding but which also establishes the scope of future government contract obligations. Our team's early-phase involvement can reduce the potential risks attached to both the contract award and contract performance. Over the years, our team has built a substantial track record in helping clients successfully negotiate, interpret, perform, and litigate contracts.

We represent clients doing business with municipal, United States, and Puerto Rico governments, as well as new and experienced government contractors. In serving our clients, we seek to identify alternative business and legal approaches and solutions that can lessen their regulatory and other compliance burdens.

What We Do

The McConnell Valdés Bids & Government Procurement team is experienced in helping clients maximize their public sector market penetration goals. We do this by:

- Negotiating, interpreting and performing contracts with government entities
- Preparing local and federal government bids and proposals
- Administration of awarded government contracts
- Defending government contractors against government claims
- Litigation of bid protests and claims
