Matthew R. Planey is a partner in the firm's Columbus office who has more than two decades of experience handling insurance defense claims. He provides strategic counsel and advice to clients throughout the Midwest, and he has won numerous jury trials across Ohio in both state and federal courts.

Mr. Planey has extensive expertise defending transportation law disputes, including first-party and third-party motor vehicle claims. He has represented clients such as taxi and transportation service providers, regional public transit providers and railway companies in uninsured motorist coverage disputes, negligence claims, personal injury and medical expense reimbursements cases. He also handles matters involving personal injury, product liability and construction litigation.

His decades-long experience handling insurance coverage disputes includes providing coverage opinions, defending extra-contractual/bad faith claims and punitive damage claims, and investigating fraudulent arson and theft claims. He advises clients on the analysis of insurance policy language, handles coverage claims and conducts investigations of coverage issues and suspected fraud.

Notable Cases
