Attorney David A. Lerner, a partner from Plunkett Cooney, one of the Midwest's oldest and largest law firms, was among the presenters at the American Bankruptcy Institute's (ABI) Detroit Consumer Bankruptcy Conference on Nov. 12 at the MGM Grand Detroit.

Lerner, who focuses his practice exclusively in the area of bankruptcy, moderated a session, titled: "What you Need to Know About Stern v. Marshall." Panel members included John P. Gustafson, a Chapter 13 trustee from Toledo, Ohio and North Carolina Central University School of Law Professor Susan Hauser. Among the topics discussed were the historical background of Stern v Marshall and the bankruptcy court jurisdiction, various courts' interpretation and application of Stern and the possible ramifications and responses to the case and the future of the bankruptcy court jurisdiction to adjudicate certain matters.

Stern v Marshall is a U.S. Supreme Court case that found, in certain matters, the bankruptcy court lacks constitutional jurisdiction to adjudicate the matter. The case has spawned hundreds of decisions regarding the extent of the bankruptcy courts jurisdiction over wide ranging areas, including fraudulent transfers and other avoidance actions.

The ABI's Eighth Annual Detroit Consumer Bankruptcy Conference was a day-long program designed especially for Michigan consumer bankruptcy practitioners. This year's program addressed the recent rulings from the Supreme and lower courts, mortgage modifications, individual Chapter 11s, jurisdiction after Stern, ethics and Chapter 13 practice. The program concluded with a panel of nine judges representing the U.S. District Court for the Eastern and Western districts.

Lerner is a member of Plunkett Cooney's Bloomfield Hills office and the firm's Banking, Bankruptcy & Creditors' Rights Practice Group. Since 1984, he has represented banks, other financial institutions, creditors and title insurance companies in bankruptcy proceedings in Texas and Michigan. His experience includes enforcement of secured creditors' rights and financing of debtors' operations. Lerner also has extensive experience in the representation of debtors-in-possession, trustees, landlords, purchasers and other secured parties in both bankruptcy and out-of-court proceedings.
