

Free Press names Plunkett Cooney among its 'top places to work'

October 23, 2009

For the second consecutive year, the Detroit Free Press has named Plunkett Cooney, one of the oldest and largest law firms in Michigan, to its list of "Top Places to Work" for 2009 as determined by employee surveys and independent research.

"This honor validates the strategies the firm's management team has implemented to help make Plunkett Cooney a great place to work," said Henry B. Cooney, the firm's President and CEO. "The fact that this award is based primarily on feedback from our employees makes the recognition even more meaningful."

Initiatives implemented through Plunkett Cooney's internal "Great Place to Work" program proved to be leading factors in the firm being ranked 18th among the top 30 companies in the survey's medium size category. The Free Press partnered with WorkplaceDynamics of Exton, PA to conduct the survey of 173 regional employers in three categories ranging in size from small businesses to employers with over 500 workers. Of the 111,000 workers employed in the participating industries, 32,363 voluntarily completed the extensive Free Press survey.

Employees rated their companies on 22 factors with prompts such as "My manager makes good use of my skills" and "I have many opportunities to learn and grow at this organization." What mattered most overall for the surveyed employees was the belief that their employer was moving in the right direction, followed closely by working for an employer that operates by strong values and ethics, and having confidence in the organization's leader.

Generally, high marks went to the top employers for their management abilities, their willingness to help foster employees' careers and the direction in which their companies are headed.

Plunkett Cooney maintains a "Great Place to Work" program firm wide to enhance the work experience for all employees. This program goes beyond compensation to focus on added value benefits beyond traditional health, vision, dental and insurance plans offered by most companies. The program includes such opportunities as continuing education, special events, employee convenience services, diversity recruitment and retention, mentoring, wellness programs and much more.

Plunkett Cooney has been recognized recently by several organizations for its employee retention programs, including the Michigan Business & Professional Association, which named the firm, for five consecutive years (2005-2009), one of its "101 Best & Brightest Places to Work For." Michigan
