Jordan Mallory is an associate in the firm's Washington, D.C. office where he is a member of the Governmental Practice. He is also a member of the firm's Cybersecurity Team, CFIUS Team, Commercial Products and Services Team, and Aerospace, Defense & Government Services Team.

Areas of Practice

Jordan represents and counsels companies that do business with the Federal Government and companies engaged in global transaction. In the government contracts space, Jordan focuses on cybersecurity and data protection counseling, advising clients on Department of Defense (DoD) and civilian agency security requirements. He also advises companies on cross-border transactions in the areas of economic sanctions, export and defense exports, and CFIUS.

Jordan attended law school at Georgetown University Law Center, where he was selected to compete in the Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot held in Vienna, Austria. As a student attorney in Georgetown's Communications & Technology Law Clinic, Jordan advocated on behalf of an immigrant rights non-profit before the CFPB regarding data rights and data privacy issues. Jordan was also a Fellow for the ABA's Legal Education Police Practices Consortium where, working with the law school's Center for Innovations in Community Safety, he researched and reported on D.C.'s integration of alternatives to police into its 911 system.

Also while in law school, Jordan was an Executive Editor for the American Criminal Law Review and co-authored "Computer Crimes" for the journal's Annual Survey of White Collar Crime. Jordan also interned for the Honorable Timothy J. Kelly on the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.
