In today's legal landscape, mass arbitrations are emerging as a formidable challenge for companies across various sectors. Imagine discovering that your organization is the target of over 20,000 individual arbitration demands, seemingly identical and without merit. Facing the prospect of $60 million in arbitration fees just to present your case, you're at the heart of what we call mass arbitration. This scenario is not just hypothetical; it's a reality for many businesses, fueled by the plaintiffs' bar's use of sophisticated data operations and social media campaigns to gather tens of thousands of claimants. This tactic employs the looming threat of arbitration fees combined with statutory damages to force settlements, even in cases where the claims may lack substance. It's a modern legal strategy that requires a modern response.

Whether you're catching up on this topic for the first time or looking for the latest updates, our upcoming session is designed for you. We will delve into the newest trends and developments in mass arbitrations, exploring how the landscape has evolved and what businesses can do in response.
