

Silicon Valley Space Week 2025

Computer History Museum, Silicon Valley
October 28-30, 2025

SVSW is where the space industry's most influential voices come together. From C-level executives and military leadership to key decision-makers across commercial and government sectors, SVSW offers rare access to the people and conversations shaping the future of space. Whether you're an industry professional, a curious innovator, or someone passionate about what's ahead, this is your opportunity to gain insights and make connections that aren't possible anywhere else.

Satellite Innovation is a key conference for advancing the technical frontier of the space industry. Held in the heart of Silicon Valley, it brings together industry leaders, founders and engineers to share insights, drive innovation, and forge meaningful connections.

Partner Drew Svor will be moderating the panel "Building the Modern Space Stack: Software-Driven Systems and AI" on October 28 from 12:15-1:00 PM.

MilSat Symposium is a pivotal event dedicated to fostering collaboration between commercial space leaders and the Department of Defense (DoD). By bringing together industry innovators and defense decision-makers, the symposium creates unique opportunities for meaningful dialogue, strategic partnerships, and impactful joint initiatives.

Partner Brian Weimer will be moderating the panel "CASR Under Fire: Who Owns Risk in Dual-Use and Hybrid Space Architecture?" on October 30 from 4:30-5:15 PM.
