As some law offices begin to reopen from COVID-19 related closings, and others move into a patchwork of staffing on site and remotely, the way we live and work now poses novel ethics and loss prevention risks for lawyers. Driven by technology, new approaches to work, and a sudden thrust into an economic collapse, lawyers need to prepare for and cope with these challenges.

Pam Bresnahan, a partner in the Vorys Washington, D.C. office, will co-present a webinar on these topics titled “The New Ethics of Working Remotely: Cybersecurity and Other Risks” on June 10, 2020.
