EVENT | 12.10.2024

This is the third webinar in the Vorys 2024 Professional Conduct & Ethics Webinar Series.

In this presentation, attorneys Marcel Duhamel and Karey Werner will address how “smart” devices that can overhear communications might result in confidentiality breaches in a time when many attorneys are working from home from time to time, where those “smart” devices may be found. The second half of the program will explain the difference between common interest and joint representation. It will address how different jurisdictions have different views about whether the common interest doctrine applies outside the litigation context, and what kinds of provisions and disclosures are desirable in a common interest agreement to substantiate the validity of the agreement while also protecting the individual client’s ability to protect their own interests.

This program has been approved for 1 hour of New Lawyer Training credit in Ohio, and live and on-demand ethics/professional conduct credit in Ohio. It has been approved for 1 hour of general credit in Virginia and 1 hour of live and on-demand ethics/professional conduct credit in Pennsylvania, Texas and Kentucky.
