Evan Sumner, an associate in the Vorys litigation group, was chosen to take part in the Cincinnati Regional Chamber's inaugural Cincy Lead program.

According to the Chamber, the program is for "early- to mid-career advancing leaders who want to strengthen their leadership skills and build meaningful professional networks." The course will include a portfolio of leadership programs and networking with local professionals to develop skills and connections that participants can immediately apply in their communities.

Sumner's practice is focused on representing plan sponsors, fiduciaries and service providers in disputes arising under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). He also maintains an active practice in complex commercial litigation, class action defense, bankruptcy and distressed asset matters.
