Rosemary Welsh, of counsel in the Vorys Cincinnati office, outlined the steps employers can take to reduce the longevity of workers' compensation claims in the May/June 2012 edition of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce's Ohio Matters magazine.

Over the past four years, the percentage of injured workers, in Ohio, who return to work within a year after their injury has dropped from 75 percent to less than 69 percent. In her column, Ms. Welsh provides six steps that all employers can take to get injured workers back on the job more quickly. To download a copy of Ms. Welsh's article, please click here.
