

Publications

Securing State Seven – Indiana’s Legislature Passes Data Privacy Legislation

Related Professionals

John L. Landolfi

Christopher L. Ingram

Christopher A. LaRocco

Gretchen Rutz Leist

Related Services

Data Strategy, Privacy and Security

Related Industries

Retail and Consumer Products

CLIENT ALERT | 4.17.2023

This past Friday, the Indiana legislature passed a comprehensive privacy law, adding to the growing collection of state privacy laws in effect or soon to become effective. This bill is set to be sent to Governor Eric Holcomb for his approval and is projected to have smooth sailing as it received unanimous votes on both chamber floors.

Indiana’s proposed law looks very similar to the Virginia Consumer Data Protection Act – providing similar rights and exceptions – with a few key differences. For example, Indiana’s legislation includes a generous thirty-day cure period that is not set to expire. Unlike most other states where privacy legislation is making significant headway, this law would not go into effect until January 1, 2026, giving Indiana businesses a significant amount of time for compliance.

For questions about these new laws or privacy compliance in general, please contact John Landolfi, Chris Ingram, Chris LaRocco, Gretchen Rutz Leist or your Vorys attorney.